The Dead Level of Production and Pro-

There is a feature of the tariff discussion which deserves more attention than it is receiving. Southern Senators and Repre sentatives for the most part are undisguised free traders; if the term be offensive let us say that they stand on the platform of their party, a tariff for revenue only. "But," they say "we must raise a certain amoun of revenue, and you of the majority are bound to raise it on the protective prin While protection is going we'll take what we can get for our States." And so the sugar and the rice and the sumac and other Southern interests insist on protection for their soil products.

New England's manufactures are touched lightly, and she is satisfied. And the repatives of New England and the South join hands to strike down the iron and steel industries of the Middle and Western States-a new combination worth inquiring into. The reason of the alliance is not difficult to find, and it is surprising that it has not been pointed out in Congress. Her own manufactures sufficiently protected, New England would find addiprofit in cheap iron and steel and such manufactures thereof as she uses in her mills in the shape of machinery or to be advanced still higher grades of manufacture. Even this would be an advantage of uncertain duration; for, the market at the mercy of British iron masters, prices would go to where they might choose to put them, once the American furnaces and mills were shut out of competition. But men do not always look ahead; too many are satisfied with the profit of to-day, leaving the future to take care of itself. Not all men are patriots. There are Tories in trade to-day as there were in the bloody politics of the

We come now to the other party to the un-American alliance. Southern Senators have stood out against a protective tariff on iron. Senator Morgan, of Alabama, one of the ablest and most persistent, has said that his State wants no tariff on iron, but if there must be a tariff let it be a low one. He is shrewd enough to know that fron will not be put on the free list, but he wants to keep the tariff down to a point very clearly established in his mind. Now what is the aim of the Southern advocates of a low iron tariff? Mr. Watterson, in his Nashville address, puts it clearly in this terse aphorism: "Production, if left to itself, will seek its level." The meanest understanding will take hold of this production to be found? Free traders know no bounds of country. The lowest level of iron production is in England, and there is nothing in the so-called political economy or the patriotism of American free traders to forbid them to seek it there. But this is not what they mean. Their selfish interest restrains them, and they mean to apply their dexd level theory to this country, for at present it seems that the South has a great advantage—how much advan tage, and the precise location of the lowest level, are matters not so definitely ascer-

The cost of making a ton of iron varies with the varying conditions of location and management as between works not far give the exact cost to them of a commodity which the have for sale. The figures give by Southern champions will serve the pres ent purpose: Cost of making a ton of iron in Pennsylvania, $18; in Tennessee, $1187, $12 43, $14, and $18; in Alabama, $9 to The dead level in Tennesse is the lowest point of all is in Alabama, and that furnishes the dead level of iron production for the whole country. And the Birmingham, and that brings the dead level within still narrower limits. Mr. Campbell's recent letter to the Intelligences from the still narrower limits are and population. Birmingham gives the reasons for the ex-ceptional good fortune of that locality.

Now suppose we leave iron production to itself, that it may seek its level. The furnaces that cannot compete with Birmingham must shut down, if Birmingham or dozen Birminghams can supply the man ket. But the American Direct Iron and Steel Company, near Pittsburgh, claims to be able to preduce a ton of iron at a cost of $6, the cost of the ore added. Perhaps another process will be devised by which the cost will fall to a still lower point and the level this time be removed Westward, it might be to Colorado. Without further elaboration the reader will have observed that the dead level doctrine is narrow, selfish, uncertain in its opera tions, brutal in its discriminations. It might be a good policy for a State or county; it is no policy for a nation whose laws are for all States and all counties, "to promote the general welfare," and foster the industrial independence of the re

If Tennessee and Alabama can make iron cheaper than New Jersey, Pennsyl vania, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Colo ado, let them make it and take their greater profit. Cheap production will be a home check on the dearer, and the grand total of our American furnaces and mills will be a safeguard against the merciless warfare of Great Britain's standing army of rich iron masters and desperate workmen. It will be observed that the claims and arguments of the levelers do away with the idea of a Northern monopoly in iron.

Tea has been grown in India since 1842. The chief seat of its growth is Assam hough it is also cultivated in Bengal prope Its manipulation and cure are done by nachinery and not by hand, as in China Because of its greater strength it is consid ered cheaper than China tea, and is con ing to be largely used in this country.

The Democratic gerrymandering scho in Indiana is not at all liked by the Dem ocratic Congressman from that State; and it is said that they propose to exert all their influence to defeat it. In this they will be assisted by many would-be Congressmen in the Legislature, and the bill will prob ably fail.
